Attendees can select one, a few, or all four sessions to attend, but organizers do recommend attending in order as the sessions build upon each other.

The three evening sessions include community potlucks.

“Sharing food is one of the oldest healing practices we have — it softens edges, builds trust, and helps us settle into relationship with one another. There are no guidelines for what to bring; just follow your heart. And if bringing something isn’t possible, please come anyway — there will always be enough,” states the Bigger Table RSVP form.
